

Additional Research Case Study

PhD Student

Your professor has asked you to carry out additional research. The research is not directly related to your own project, but it sounds interesting. It could mean the opportunity to publish in a prestigious journal and might yield some extra money.

However, you would have trouble finding the time to carry out the research.

The fact is that on top of your own research, you are busy with teaching in this period, not to mention that it would put this year's long-awaited holiday at risk.